You Helped This Caregiver Survive the Pandemic

Elizabeth and Her Mom are Safer and Healthier Because of Your Support
CaringKind really came through for me. I would call the Helpline all the time - “What am I going to do?” “How do I get her in the bath?” Now, thanks to Nancy, I am a master at the bath!

I took a class on Understanding Dementia taught by Adina – it was so helpful. I was having all these issues and Adina gave me the tools I needed. My notebook is literally filled.

Not only that, but thanks to a respite grant from CaringKind, we were able to hire a home health aide. I was worried about an outside person coming into the house, possibly exposing my mom to Covid. But I had to do it – we simply needed the help. And our aide was terrific.

But then my worst fears came true – our aide was diagnosed with Covid-19 in January. And now I’m back to square one – I can’t leave the house without someone being here to take care of my mom. I visit my own apartment briefly just to pick up my mail. It’s ... stressful.

But, as hard as things are for us, I remind myself that we’re also lucky. My mom was in a rehabilitation facility from September to November of 2020. Communicating while being socially distant was really difficult – for me and for her. The phone was a lifeline for us, but even that was inadequate. She’s back home now, where I can control her environment and it’s safer. But it’s also isolating.

And that’s why I’m so grateful for CaringKind. I couldn’t stand here today calmly without them. And that’s from my heart. I didn’t know what to do in certain situations. I would call and say, “I’m on the floor with my mother – can you help me with this?” And CaringKind did. They’re like angels, these people.

CaringKind offers Respite Grants to eligible NYC caregivers of persons with dementia, offering financial assistance for emergencies. Our one-time grants do not exceed $2,000. Eligibility is based on need. For more information, contact our Helpline at 646-744-2900.
Diversity Conference
We Fought Health Disparities With Your Support!

On February 10th, CaringKind hosted a Diversity Conference to help fight systemic disparities in health care by addressing the needs of African American caregivers.

A distinguished panel of speakers spoke to more than 200 participants. Our speakers included Dr. Karen Bell, Nick Buettner, Dan Gasby, and Pastor Dr. Lawrence Brown. With a cooking demonstration by Melba Wilson, and an exercise class by Coach Lisa Charles, the conference represents a commitment by CaringKind to support minority caregivers.

The conference also reflects CaringKind’s continued efforts to include caregiver wellness as a key pillar in our mission to support Alzheimer’s caregivers and the people in their care.

Eleonora’s Message
by Eleonora Tornatore-Mikesh
CaringKind President & CEO

Sitting here and reflecting on the last 12 months of this pandemic, I think about the work that CaringKind has been able to accomplish. At every level, our volunteers and donors make these accomplishments possible. Our volunteer board members spend countless hours on governance, our Helpline volunteers answer urgent caregiver calls, and our volunteer Support Group leaders provide direct support to hundreds of caregivers. And our donors fund it all – allowing CaringKind to survive and thrive.

There are so many unknowns these days, we’re more stressed than ever. Which is why I’m happy to note that the Mayo Clinic has found six health benefits to volunteering! Research has proven that donating your time to help others develops a new sense of appreciation for yourself. Especially during a pandemic, the Mayo Clinic recommends volunteering – it’s a healthy way to channel your time and energy. What else does volunteering do? It can increase your confidence and expand your connections. When we feel empathy and act generously, we can increase levels of oxytocin in our brains. Volunteering can be a mental pick-me-up.

Some people think volunteers just stuff envelopes. The truth is that – as noted above – CaringKind’s volunteers provide meaningful support that changes people’s lives every day. I have met hundreds of volunteers of all levels, many of whom I now consider colleagues and friends.

In fact, the role of volunteers and donors is so important to us, we’ve re-designed this quarterly newsletter to focus on the impact that we make with your support. And we’ve made it just four pages long so that it’s economical to print and mail!

The stories on these pages are only possible with your time, talent, and dollars. Please take pride in all you’ve helped accomplish. Thank you!

Caregiver Champions
My Caregiver Champion Story
by Kyle Budinscak, founder of ComForCare

When I decided to open ComForCare in New York City in 2015, we aimed to create a home care service built upon caregivers who are excited about engaging with their clients. If we could identify people with various professional backgrounds – artists, performers, graduate students, educators, semi-retired professionals, etc. – and match them with clients based on their shared interests or personality factors, then we might be able to make a real difference.

Five years into our journey, we’ve served hundreds of older adults who are facing the challenges of dementia. Our champions are the talented, empathic caregivers who brighten the lives of our clients daily.

I’ve been encouraged by the efforts of our staff, as well as the many other organizations in our city that are innovating to fight back against the effects of dementia. I believe there is much more progress to come.

Our podcast, Caregiver/Storyteller, has just won a national award!

The storytelling podcast, created and hosted by our own Chris Doucette, was just named by the Family Caregiver Alliance as the winner of their 2020 Innovations in Alzheimer’s Caregiving Award in the Creative Expression category. Not only does the award raise awareness of CaringKind, it also comes with a $20,000 prize.

Fifty caregiving programs from around the country competed, and in February the CaringKind podcast was selected as the winner.

We are thrilled to be recognized for the podcast and we are grateful to the Family Caregiver Alliance and the award program funders: The Rosalinde and Arthur Gilbert Foundation and the Helen Daniels Bader Fund, a Bader Philanthropy.

CaringKind Helped Find a Missing Person
A Person with Dementia Went Missing

On a chilly Friday late afternoon in December, just a day after a nor-easter left the New York area, every caregiver’s worst nightmare happened: the person in their care went missing. A 75-year old Russian-speaking woman from Long Island wandered in Brooklyn. New York City issued a Missing Vulnerable Adult Alert, a system designed to alert the public of a missing vulnerable senior.

CaringKind Took Action
The woman was last seen in Brooklyn, so CaringKind’s Wanderer’s Safety Program team sprang into action. Staff posted information about the woman on social media and contacted the detective who was handling the case. Next, we created and emailed a Missing Person Bulletin to hospital emergency rooms and admitting departments, social workers, and several New York City Police Department Neighborhood Coordination Officers (NCOs).

The Person with Dementia Was Found!
Just a few hours later, the missing woman was found! Shortly after the WSP email blast, an NYPD NCO who received CaringKind’s email recognized the woman walking in Coney Island. The officer approached her, confirmed her identity, escorted her to a nearby police precinct, and contacted her family. Thanks to the coordinated efforts of the police, MedicAlert, and the CaringKind MedicAlert NYC Wanderers Safety Program, the woman was reunited safely with her family less than 24 hours after going missing.

To help us help the next person who wanders away from safety, please consider supporting CaringKind with a donation. Thank you!

In Memory of Elinor Gipfel, 1936 – 2020
By Stephanie Aragon
Vice President of Caregiving Services

Elinor Gipfel’s beautiful smile and great laugh lit up the Helpline office whenever she volunteered. Elinor was a loyal supporter of CaringKind and enjoyed giving back to the community. A retired public school teacher, she was a proud and dignified woman and fiercely independent. Even when she had to use a cane traveling from Brooklyn to our Manhattan office, Elinor was here every Friday at 7:45 am, with a coffee, croissant, and newspaper in hand. A lifelong musician, she would come to the office with her flute, practicing after her helpline shift. Elinor had a passion for learning. She spoke fluent German and French and loved to listen to staff speak in different languages.

Always interested in the latest news about Alzheimer’s disease research, Elinor left newspaper clippings and magazine articles on my desk to share with staff. Elinor went above and beyond with callers. Not only would she educate them about the stages of dementia, she would also teach them about the derivation of the word dementia. In a final act of generosity and caring, Elinor made a generous bequest from her estate, ensuring that caregivers can find information and support in the future. She will be greatly missed.

Elinor’s story continues at caringkindnyc.org/newsletter.
